Beazley Claims Marine, Energy, Aviation & Space

With their extensive experience across marine, energy, aviation and space, Beazley's specialist claims managers partner closely with clients to resolve claims efficiently and effectively.

Marine

We cover a range of exposures relating to marine cargo, hull, piracy, marine liability and marine war. Following claim notification, our specialist marine claims team immediately review a reported situation to determine the best strategy for a prompt claim resolution. In the event of a marine casualty, our staff marine engineer may be deployed on site to assist the client and resolve technical engineering issues.

Energy

This area of expertise covers energy supply, generation and delivery where we insure clients against exposures in upstream, midstream, downstream and utilities industry settings. Beazley is a major lead insurer for upstream energy and insures over 400 of the world's foremost upstream oil and gas companies. In addition, we lead in many developing areas of risk, insuring nearly every offshore wind farm in UK waters. Our claims teams have the capabilities to expertly handle the range of needs in this specialist area from construction losses to control of well whilst having the sufficient resource to handle major loss events with CAT exposure.

Aviation

Our claims team provides a specialist service for airlines and general aviation clients globally.

Space

We cover exposures for satellites, covering their entire lifespan from launch to in-orbit testing and during their commercial exploitation. These include telecommunication satellites in geostationary orbit as well as observation, navigation, meteorological, scientific and government satellites.

Global reach

With an international team we can manage claims wherever in the world our clients may have operations.

Claims example

On hearing that a client's vessel was listing we immediately deployed our in-house marine engineers to assist. With the support and technical guidance of our engineer the vessel was stabilised (she had been listing heavily from a grounding and was close to being a total loss), cargo on board was saved from further damage, and towage was organised which allowed the vessel to successfully reach her destination. With the benefit of having our engineer 'on the ground' for more than 16 days, Beazley's claims managers were able to directly understand the client's needs, resulting in prompt payments of funds.

"Dealing with such diverse claims coverage requires our claims handlers to have a deep technical expertise of the industries they work with and understanding of the risks that they face. Working alongside our underwriting team, it is the way that we apply that knowledge and understanding to the claims handling process, to bring about the best possible outcome for our insureds, that really sets us apart."
