Dolden Wallace Folick LLP

Dolden Wallace Folick is a national law firm specializing in insurance defence. Their lawyers have the knowledge and experience to defend sexual abuse claims, and will work to undertake comprehensive investigations in order to determine the nature and risk associated with the allegations.

Such claims often involve “long tail” allegations extending to incidents that occurred many years in the past, which can pose unique challenges in defending. For this reason they routinely use alternative dispute resolution in order to minimize the risk, and to reach a negotiated settlement which protects the privacy of the parties given the sensitive nature of the underlying allegations.

Their lawyers have acted as counsel in leading Supreme Court of Canada decisions dealing with sexual abuse allegations.

Miller Thomson LLP

Miller Thomson is one of Canada’s leading firms concerning the defence of sexual abuse allegations and litigation. With offices across Canada, they provide a co-ordinated national approach to profit and non-profit entities to deal with crisis and other emergency situations.

The firm’s extensive defence practice has acted on several hundred cases, and specialises in the de-escalation of an incident and mapping out effective communication and litigation strategies. They emphasise a realistic approach to claims and claim handling that seeks to effectively resolve a situation.

In terms of litigation support Miller Thomson has pioneered alternative dispute models for multi-plaintiff and class action claims, and has acted on some of Canada’s most difficult cases. While most claims are effectively resolved, Miller Thomson has also defended matters in Canadian courts with an experienced team of counsel who are expert in historical and non-historical abuse claims.
